Product Management Skills Assessment

How do you know where your product management skills are strong and where there are gaps?

Tarigo's Product Management Skills Assessment provides an objective view of individual and team capability, helping you understand current strengths, identify development needs and create a more focused plan for building product management skills.

Why assess product management skills?

Product teams can be difficult to assess consistently. Individual experience, job titles and responsibilities don't always give you a clear picture of capability.

A structured assessment gives you a clearer starting point for development, helping individuals understand where they excel and giving organisations better insight into where training and support could have the greatest impact.

Understand your product management capability

1 Product Strategy

Understanding how to create and connect product strategy to business goals.

2 Customer & Market

Understanding customers, markets and opportunities.

3 Product Discovery

Using research and insight to identify and validate opportunities.

4 Prioritisation & Decision-Making

Making informed choices about where to focus time and resources.

5 Product Delivery

Working effectively with teams to turn product plans into outcomes.

6 Commercial Thinking

Understanding the commercial and business context of product decisions.

7 Leadership & Collaboration

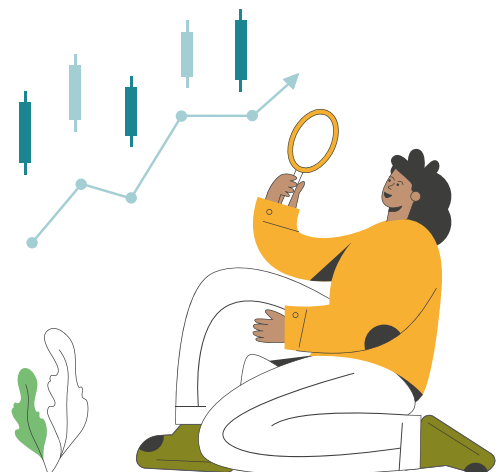

Influencing stakeholders and creating effective cross-functional relationships.

8 Product Performance

Using measures and insight to understand and improve product performance.

From assessment to action

The assessment isn't just about identifying weaknesses. It gives you a clearer picture of where strengths can be built on, where support may be needed and which development priorities could make the biggest difference.
